Spotlight: Calliope

Accomplishments: Calliope, Saint Joseph Academy's literary arts publication, provides students with the opportunity to be featured in a published book. It is completely student-led in selecting which pieces are to be included in the publication, which is released annually towards the end of the school year.

"Calliope is important because it gives the young women at the Academy the opportunity to show off their work. We have so many talented, artistic and brilliant students that don't often get the chance to be featured in a publication, so we as a club strive to provide it. I am the co-editor for Calliope, alongside Emma Hejlik ’21. We both review each submission, run club meetings together, work with our moderators College Counseling Department Chair Ms. Susan Emmerich and Visual Arts teacher Mrs. Beth Pleban to layout the publication and more," shared Meghan Rogers ’21.

"My favorite part about Calliope is when the final copies are distributed to the student body. I love to see everyone in my homeroom flipping through to read poetry or look at the art pieces. It's very rewarding to see everyone's hard work go into something so amazing," stated Meghan.

Get Involved: Students can get involved by simply coming to Calliope meetings. The co-editors send out emails to remind club members about meetings and all are welcome. Any student is able to join the Calliope Editorial Board at any time!
